

Resources & Facilities

Physical Chemistry (1) Lab

Bomb Calorimeter

Is a type of constant-volume calorimeter used in measuring the heat of combustion of a particular reaction.

Differential Scanning Calorimeter (DSC)

A thermo analytical technique in which the difference in the amount of heat required to increase the temperature of a sample and reference is measured as a function of temperature.